Benjamin Cobb Hardin, Capt., -G.S.A.

Benjamin Cobb Hardin, son of Amos and Margaret E. Cobb Hardin (from North Carolina), was born October 19, 1827 at Lenoir City (Hardin Valley), Knox County, Tennessee. His father owned a cotton plantation and many slaves. The family moved to an area just north of the Mississippi-Alabama line, and they and their relatives owned the land that is now Hardin County, Tennessee.

Ben was living at Springfield, Missouri (Greene County), when he married Mary Jane Snodgrass, daughter of James and Elizabeth Gray Snodgrass on April 26, 1854. A woman of small stature and great spirit and determination, her shimmering red-gold hair touched the floor, when she stood erect and tilted her head back. She loved to ride fine horses and won a gold pencil at an equestrian competition at the Springfield Fair.

Their children were: Eliza Sarah Ellener, Margaret Elizabeth, James Gibson and Florence Angy.

Ben had four brothers (no sisters) and when the Civil War touched Missouri, they all joined the Confederacy. Benjamin served with General Sterling Price's army at the Battle of Wilson Creek, in the rank of Capt. Their troops were surprised by the Union forces. His good horse was shot from under him, but he managed to catch a white mule "an ornery, but very substantial cuss", which carried him through the rest of the battle and to safety.

While her husband was away, Mary Jane knew the fears of living in an area where feelings ran high, and sentiments were almost equally divided between the North and South. Several times she left home, hiding cattle
